

The scatter plot displays three distinct clusters of data points. The blue cluster is located on the left side of the plot, the cyan cluster is in the upper-middle section, and the magenta cluster is on the right side. Each cluster is represented by a set of small, semi-transparent circles, with a larger, solid black circle indicating the centroid of each group. The axes are marked with tick lines but lack numerical labels.

